

White alright for IVF

SOUL legend Barry White's songs are being used to boost the chances of IVF embryos.

A pioneering study, by renowned Spanish fertility clinic Institut de Marques, has shown that musical vibrations increase the success of IVF.

Music

And now songs from the late soul singer have become the most streamed music through the iPods playing in the incubators where embryos are developing.

The sounds of Barry White's velvet bass baritone help to mimic the process the embryo goes through in the first five days of life when it travels through the Fallopian tubes of the mother.
